Database indexes in practice

An index is an extra data structure that avoids scanning every row of a table.

Balanced trees

The most common index structure is a balanced tree which finds a key in logarithmic time.

Hash indexes

A hash index answers equality lookups quickly but cannot serve range queries at all.